

RESIDENCE OF JAS. CANARIO, HILO, HAWAII

Within the confines of Hilo a number of beautiful residences have been erected, commanding a magnificent view of the broad Pacific ocean, while the natural tropical verdure that surrounds them forms a beautiful background.

Among the attractive homes is that of J. S. Canario, a prominent citizen and merchant of the city, whose place is situated on the main road to Olaa and three-quarters of a mile from the court house in Hilo.

The property has a frontage of 280 feet and a depth of 332 feet, and skirts along the ocean beach for 390 feet. The residence is a three-story structure, the basement having a concrete flooring, in which are located bath rooms, lavatories, laundry, store room and three servants' rooms. The first story contains two bedrooms, bath-room, kitchen, serving-room, etc. The dining-room, which is 34x16, opens out upon a lanai; this room and the parlors and hall can be all thrown into one grand room for social gatherings. This story is bordered on two sides by a veranda ten feet in width. The second story contains five bedrooms, lavatory and bath-rooms, bordered on three sides by a magnificent veranda ten feet in width. The third floor is not finished off as yet, but on the mauka side there is a wide veranda overlooking the ocean. There is a beautiful driveway around the residence, while a "portecoché" adds to the front appearance of the residence. Connected with the home place is a two-story stable with accommodation for four head of stock. In this report appears a view of this attractive home.

At two points some five and six miles apart and on the road from Hilo to Kapaemahu are situated the sugar cane lands of J. S. Canario. The two places comprise 175 acres in extent, of which about 150 acres are considered good cane land, which has been leased to individual planters. The cane from this land, after it matures, will be crushed in the Wainaku mill, which is the natural outlet for the product.

At one time a portion of this land was planted in coffee trees, and while the trees bore well the low price of coffee, coupled with the cost of labor, made the enterprise anything but a success. The rainfall in this section is practically the same as in other parts of the Hilo district, and quite sufficient to mature the growing cane.
